

Being an Indiana resident I am disgusted that these companies would waste anyone's time trying to fight the Telephone Consumer Protection Act.

Does it not occur to anyone that having a home telephone is more trouble than it is worth when we are bombarded with solicitors on a daily basis. It makes much more sense to have a cellular phone so that you cannot be bothered.

Like most people, I work all day, and when I get home at night I want to relax and eat dinner with my family. If I choose to do business with a company then it is my job to take the time out of my schedule to find the company I feel is worthy of that business. By constantly harassing us with unwanted telephone calls is ridiculous, and to be honest, when I receive these unwanted telephone calls that insures that I will NEVER do business with that company. When these companies have no regard for us and our wanting to be left alone ~ then why should we consider them as consumers for our business?
